

JAIN INTERNATIONAL RESIDENTIAL SCHOOL

INFOSYS TRIP

The students of Grade XII visited the INFOSYS Campus at Electronic City, Bangalore, on 10th June 2009. On arrival, students were briefed about the history and achievements of the global IT giant at the Conference Room.

The Conference Room boasted Asia's largest corporate level video panels. A few queries of the students were also answered by a representative. The students were then taken on a tour around the campus that spanned 32 acres. The campus itself was a small city with glass buildings and bicycle lanes.

The campus was environment friendly with lots of greenery. Employees moved around in bicycles. The students were shown lawns where high-level visitors planted trees. Littering was strictly prohibited. Libraries, gymnasiums and dance rooms helped keep employees motivated.

After the tour, students had a sumptuous lunch at the canteen. The trip was truly educational and helped students understand the IT services industry much better.

On arrival at the venue, all students were ushered into the large, state of the art conference rooms. Fully equipped with micro phones, video anis and one of the largest corporate display televisions, this conference room was a feast for the eyes, students were given a power point presentation on this history and growth of INFOSYS, their motto and ideals. Later on students clarified all their doubts related to this IT giant.

Students were taken on a guided campus tour of INFOSYS. INFOSYS Bengaluru, is a micro city sprawled over 32 acres of prime property consisting of 50 buildings, numerous gardens, fountains etc. This little city boasts of 5 food courts, dominos, CCD and subway outlets, Beauty saloons, India's largest corporate gym, swimming pools, steam saunas, Jacuzzi, souvenir shops and much much more. The campus is a 'zero-pollution' zone and most employees commute between the numerous buildings on bicycles. Littering anywhere on the campus is prohibited.

Students learnt a lot about employee welfare management and effective organisation.

After a sumptuous lunch, students headed back to JIRS, enriched with knowledge and insight, grateful for such an enjoyable learning experience.
